Standard arms
Posted by TedS - 21 Nov 2012 21:58

Got my WE base model today and expected the arms to look like the second set (with washers) shown in this video:

The arms look like the first set but seem to have less "play"

A suggestion - add a picture to the website that shows "whats in the box" to reflect what the current parts look like - figure 8/page 12 but an actual digital photo.

==========

Re: Standard arms
Posted by wickededge - 25 Nov 2012 23:16

Billabong wrote:

Why is this such a big deal?

Nine months after the event, why not just improve something so all this noise goes away?

Not when people complain, do it before they buy it.

If only it were so simple...
We have to order our production runs more than a year out, so making changes is very slow and, in this last go round, there wasn't enough time to go through the process of design, sample, comment, sample, comment, sample, approval, production. That's why it will be the middle of next year before we can hope to have the stock WE100 models shipping with the new mods. The beauty of the Pro-Pack 2 parts is that they're being machined by our guys in VT and changes to the design can be fairly quick. The stock parts are extruded and any changes mean changes to the tooling, which takes a while to roll out.

==========

Re: Standard arms
Posted by Billabong - 25 Nov 2012 23:27

---

wickededge wrote:

If only it were so simple... We have to order our production runs more than a year out, so making changes is very slow and, in this last go round, there wasn't enough time to go through the process of design, sample, comment, sample, comment, sample, approval, production. That's why it will be the middle of next year before we can hope to have the stock WE100 models shipping with the new mods. The beauty of the Pro-Pack 2 parts is that they're being machined by our guys in VT and changes to the design can be fairly quick. The stock parts are extruded and any changes mean changes to the tooling, which takes a while to roll out.

Well I guess I was wrong thinking that if the WEPS is always on backorder it meant you exhausted the supply from nine months ago.

I can only ask questions and go by what I am told.

==========

Re: Standard arms
Posted by wickededge - 25 Nov 2012 23:40

_____

Billabong wrote:

Well I guess I was wrong thinking that if the WEPS is always on backorder it meant you exhausted the supply from nine months ago.

I can only ask questions and go by what I am told.

I see why you'd get that idea. We've gone on back order for a variety of reasons, most often to do with the stones in the sharpener, but also because, while we place a big order a year out, we then have it released in lots over the year and we haven't always gotten the timing of the releases right because we don't anticipate delays or properly project the sales. Other issues with the releases also crop up throughout the process and delay the shipments.

==========

Re: Standard arms
Posted by Billabong - 26 Nov 2012 00:00

_____

wickededge wrote:

I see why you'd get that idea. We've gone on back order for a variety of reasons, most often to do with the stones in the sharpener, but also because, while we place a big order a year out, we then have it released in lots over the year and we haven't always gotten the timing of the releases right because we don't anticipate delays or properly project the sales. Other issues with the releases also crop up throughout the process and delay the shipments.

If I am to quote facts, then I prefer to hear it from horses mouth.

I do thankyou for your many replies and insights into your business.

Contrary to some peoples opinions, I have spent over $1,000 now and have not complained about wanting my money back.

I was offered new (old) arms for free, as you are aware, I declined that offer as I now have the ball joint version.

I am very happy with my WEPS and only wish everyone had the resources to afford the ProPack II, it is a very nice system.

I feel my voice here is to balance out opinions from your more loyal followers and contribute something to your brains trust.

It's a shame some think they know my intentions and that they are evil.

Too much TV I guess?

Anyway, one more question.

Will I be on the Christmas card list?

==========

Re: Standard arms
Posted by wickededge - 26 Nov 2012 00:14

_____

Billabong wrote:

wickededge wrote:

I see why you'd get that idea. We've gone on back order for a variety of reasons, most often to do with the stones in the sharpener, but also because, while we place a big order a year out, we then have it released in lots over the year and we haven't always gotten the timing of the releases right because we don't anticipate delays or properly project the sales. Other issues with the releases also crop up throughout the process and delay the shipments.

If I am to quote facts, then I prefer to hear it from horses mouth.

I do thankyou for your many replies and insights into your business.

Contrary to some peoples opinions, I have spent over $1,000 now and have not complained about wanting my money back.

I was offered new (old) arms for free, as you are aware, I declined that offer as I now have the ball joint version.

I am very happy with my WEPS and only wish everyone had the resources to afford the ProPack II, it is a very nice system.

I feel my voice here is to balance out opinions from your more loyal followers and contribute something to your brains trust.

It's a shame some think they know my intentions and that they are evil.

Too much TV I guess?

Anyway, one more question.

Will I be on the Christmas card list?

Chris, I always appreciate you and I know you're main effort is to provide a balanced view and I usually feel like you're doing me a favor by pushing a little. It's really healthy. This thread has been a challenge because there have been a few differences of opinion and it hasn't been helped by the fact that I've been away from decent internet access and maybe that's made you feel like I was blowing off your comments. I do stand firmly by the statement that I think the stock arms work great as-is for many people but also acknowledge that they can be improved and I will make improvements to them and the rest of the machine as quickly as I can though that might seem painfully slow at times.

If I were one to send Christmas cards, I'd definitely send you one.

==========

Re: Standard arms
Posted by Billabong - 26 Nov 2012 01:43

---

wickededge wrote:

Chris, I always appreciate you and I know you're main effort is to provide a balanced view and I usually feel like you're doing me a favor by pushing a little. It's really healthy. This thread has been a challenge because there have been a few differences of opinion and it hasn't been helped by the fact that I've been away from decent internet access and maybe that's made you feel like I was blowing off your comments. I do stand firmly by the statement that I think the stock arms work great as-is for many people but also acknowledge that they can be improved and I will make improvements to them and the rest of the machine as quickly as I can though that might seem painfully slow at times.

If I were one to send Christmas cards, I'd definitely send you one.

Then why the extra attention I'm getting behind the scenes?

Not once have you said mind your own business or such, but a few others have.

I must admit, I am confused, why do I have a fan club?

==========

Re: Standard arms

Posted by leomitch - 26 Nov 2012 03:32

Sorry to be late coming to the party. I am after all semi-retired as Global Mod but here are a few comments.

First of all I think the Mods so far have exercised restraint in order to allow some healthy if slightly volcanic debate. I can see where some heat was developed.

The Internet is a great place to communicate, but one of the problems here is that we are not face to face. The problem with that is that you can't see the commentators face which tells you a lot in a debate. You miss subtleties. But the main problem is that sometimes a comment is made that the person would never had said in a normal conversation. Having done that and not seeing the other person's response/expression, there is a lapse in time during which the participants stew a bit and their anger starts to get the best of them. Enough of that.

What I see is some disagreement among persons who really mean no harm. We are a family here and as a kind of grandfather, it is my job to say there, there; no harm done; nobody was trying to dis you and so on. I suggest that if you have further things to say to each other, do it with PM's to each other, otherwise I suggest the topic should be allowed to simmer down. Should tempers flare too much I am not above freezing the topic, but I would prefer we handle this all like gentlemen.

For my part I think this debate is over, except to say, I have probably had my WEPS longer than anyone here. I have never found the stock arms that I have had until just recently, to harm my sharpened edges. They are frighteningly sharp no question. If one side of the edge is 1 degree or so off the other side, frankly Scarlet I don't give a damn! Sharp enough for this human, sharp enough for dozens of hunters who gut and skin out elk and other critters by the hundreds, sharp enough to shave and so on. The WEPS rocks and I have rebutted some of the best sharpeners in the business over this. If you have further concerns let me know and we'll talk.

Have a good night guys! I am going back to bed.

Leo

==========

Re: Standard arms

Posted by Billabong - 26 Nov 2012 03:40

_____

leomitch wrote:

Have a good nigh guys! I am going back to bed.

Leo

Sweet dreams young fella!

==========

Re: Standard arms

Posted by xuzme720 - 26 Nov 2012 21:40

_____

Billabong wrote:

It's fine xuzme720, I thought it was a funny play on words. 😐

A bit of editing can change the original intention of a post.

It seems people want me to admit that I suffer from OCD (Obsessive Compulsive Disorder) and am somewhat different from a knife collector that strives for a perfect finish on a uber expensive knife.

I got it.
and I don't want you thinking it upset me or anything. Far from it!
I am a prime example of taking something way over the top and still not being satisfied.
Call it anal or OCD or whatever...whether it's a choice or a drive or an obsession it is still a very personal experience. Most people will be fine with the arms in the stock form. Obviously a few of us won't be. But I'm not sure the few of us that decide to take it to the next level or strive for perfection should expect a complete retooling and the added expense it would mean to future kits. The WEPS system is adequate for most people as it comes out of the box. Is it perfect? No. Can you make scary sharp edges out of the box? Yes, with a little break in. Can the arms be improved? Of course! Not many things around that can't be improved in some way or other.

I don't want this to sound like I'm attacking anyone. I'm simply agreeing with the notion that there is room for improvement but disagreeing with the notion that the stock arms are defective in some way.

Now where did I set my drink?

==========

Re: Standard arms
Posted by Billabong - 26 Nov 2012 22:15

---

xuzme720 wrote:

Now where did I set my drink?

I'm sending a WEPS to Oprah, see if it makes her "favorite things" list.

www.oprah.com/packages/oprahs-ultimate-favorite-things.html

==========